ECONOMIC RECOVERY IS ON ITS WAY — RAPID RISE IN THE JOB MARKET!

From The Desk of Julie Della, Managing Director

The demand on our services over the past few months has rapidly increased. Demand was at its highest peak for 2009 in October/November with 69 available positions compared to 22 available positions at the same time in 2008. We believe the job market will keep improving as demand increases. Employers need to be mindful that with more job opportunities presenting themselves to potential employees, employers will need to be savvy to ensure they are in a position to employ the best possible staff for their organisation. Salaries are remaining steady, however with the increase of available jobs to the market, another skills shortage in certain sectors of the job market will again become evident.

How to Get YOUR Resume Noticed!

Unless your resume catches the interviewer's eye in 10 seconds it's over, you're done!

So the big question is how do you Catch the interviewer's eye?

Here comes the best advice on how to get a job interview you'll ever get.

Cater your resume to the job description!

We can't stress this point enough. It's imperative that you cater your resume to each position you apply for and we mean taking each line on the job description and writing a line on your resume to reflect your experience with regard to that line.

Yes, it takes more time than sending the same resume to 100's of jobs, but you're far better off applying to a fraction of those jobs with a resume specifically written for each job.

Put yourself in the interviewer's shoes.

Their job is to hire the most qualified candidate.

They've been given a set of qualifications to look for: aka the job description, and that's exactly what they're after, so give it to them!
